

CPD Seminar

Are your clients (and you) ready for an investigation by the Hong Kong Competition Commission?

Seminar summary

Do you think a dawn raid is just another legal visit? Have you assumed that interviews with the Competition Commission are not much different from a section 183 interview by the SFC? Do you take it that privilege against self-incrimination can offer as much protection as your client may expect? If so, this CPD Seminar has more to tell you.

In this Seminar, the speakers will examine the various rights and remedies available for a person or entity under investigation by the Competition Commission. The interactive discussion will also cover constraints on the Commission's power in relation to dawn raids, interviews and other investigation procedures, and offers some practical tips on how to proceed ahead as investigation and enforcement progresses.

This Seminar is intended for practitioners who are engaged in or interested in exploring more about competition law. This Seminar will be delivered in Chinese. A drinks reception will be held in Chambers after the Seminar.
